Guide to your Client Money Statement

To protect your money, we keep it separate from the assets of our company. Your statement shows money held in our Client Money account on the specified date. This represents your money that is currently held outside of your investment. The client money type is explained in more detail below.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q. Why have you sent me this statement?

A. We will send you a statement at least annually if you hold a Client Money balance on the specified date that the statement is produced. You can also request this on an ad hoc basis.

Q. How is my money protected?

A. Your money is retained in a Client Money account which is separate from assets of our company. This is in accordance with the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) regulations.

Q. Has this money now been invested/paid out?

A. Your statement shows the balance in the Client Money account on the specified date. Your money may have been held in this account temporarily whilst awaiting investment or payment. You may have already received a cheque in payment for this amount or received a contract note confirming the investment.

Q. Will I receive interest on this money?

A. No. Our Client Money account does not generate interest.

Q. How does this affect me, do I need to take any action?

If you have not received payment or confirmation of investment, you may still hold a balance in our account.
